

RETREAT OF GERMAN ARMIES CONTINUES ALL ALONG THE LINE; CROWN PRINCE OFFERS FIGHT

ALLIES CONTINUE IN PURSUIT OF KAISER'S FORCES EXCEPT AT VERDUN WHERE RESISTANCE IS OFFERED.

FRESH TROOPS READY

Half A Million Soldiers Are Gathered at Paris to Assist in Rout of Enemy — Allies Take New Courage.

The right and center wings of the German army of invasion in France is gradually withdrawing and the left wing stoutly resisting the advance of the allies, according to the best obtainable information today.

The German Crown Prince appears to be holding his own in the vicinity of Verdun.

The capture by the Germans of a fortified position southwest of Verdun and a battle between Paris and the river Marne described in a report from the German headquarters have been noticed earlier in press dispatches.

The British statement reviews the operations of the British in France from September 4 to 10, but reveals nothing new.

An official communication issued at Paris at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Paris time, declares that the Germans are "retreating everywhere." "They are," it is added, "abandoning all positions which they established to cover a possible retreat."

Reports concerning the fighting in Russian Poland and Galicia are conflicting. It appears that the Austrians have met serious reverses, but continued struggles, establish that they have not been completely overwhelmed by the Russians.

Still less is definitely known of the operations in east Prussia. According to advices from Petrograd a Russian army is before the capital Koenigsberg, but official advices two days ago stated that Russian forces were bombarding Koenigsberg.

According to British reports the initial success of General Hindenburg in East Prussia which has been admitted in Petrograd was followed by further German triumphs to the south of Koenigsberg.

The Belgian army operating from Antwerp is represented at harassing the Germans in that district to prevent the two German army corps there moving south to the aid of the German main line.

Belgian official reports admit that their forces were obliged to retire after a counter attack by the Germans.

successes against the Austrians, the greater part of whose armies are engaged with the Russians to the north.

German Retreat General.

Paris, Sept. 13.—It was officially announced this afternoon that the Germans are still retreating everywhere. They are abandoning all the provisions which they elected to cover a possible retreat.

The official statement follows: "First, on our left, the enemy had prepared to the north of Aisne, a line of defense which it was forced to abandon. Some detachments which it had held at Amiens now have retired upon Peronnas and St. Quentin. Second, on the central the Germans have taken up a defensive position beyond Reims, but are unable to hold it. In the Argonne region they turned back toward the north beyond the forest of Beloeux and beyond Triaucourt.

"On the right wing the retreating movement of the Germans is general from Nancy to the Vosges. Yesterday evening French territory in this vicinity had been completely evacuated."

Washington, Sept. 14.—Official dispatches today from the French embassy from Bordeaux elaborate upon previous reports of the victorious advance of the allies.

"General Joffre tells the government that our victory is becoming more and more complete, and brilliant," says the report.

"The enemy is in full retreat and is abandoning prisoners, wounded, and guns and ammunition."

"On our left we have crossed the river Aisne below Soissons. Valenciennes and Amiens have been evacuated. At the center our army is north of the forest of Argonne."

Crown Prince Winsing. Berlin, Sept. 14, via wireless to the Associated Press.—The headquarters of the German army in Berlin today gave out the following official report.

"The German crown prince has captured the enemy's fortified position southwest of Verdun and is now bombarding with heavy artillery the outer fort lying to the south."

"A battle is in progress between Paris and the river Marne, over a front of 125 kilometers stretching from Nanterre in the west where the crown prince's army is separated from the main battle by the forest of Argonne."

The armies of the crown prince of Bavaria and General Von Hoesingen are in formal battle near the upper Moselle.

Gerard Denies Report.

"James W. Gerard, the American ambassador to Germany, has given out an interview to the press denying persistent reports that the United States was preparing to join the allies; that Mr. Whitlock, the American minister at Brussels, had attached the mayor of Brussels to his staff; that the flag has been raised at Ghent, and that he had advised Americans to hurry away because the United States was going to war."

Paris, Sept. 14, 8:20 a. m.—The retreat of the armies of Generals Von Kluck and Von Baulou continued at last accounts with considerable rapidity. The only official comment last night was that the United States was in contact with the enemy and had crossed the river Aisne.

The whereabouts of the Germans was not revealed, but it is evident that they do not intend to make a stand on the line from Reims to Soissons, and it is hardly likely, it is thought here, that they will halt their retreat before reaching Belgium. They have already made two thirds of the distance from Provins in the department of Seine-et-Marne to the frontier.

Rains Retard Retreat.

The heavy rains of Saturday and Sunday are not likely to facilitate the movement of the famous 429 military machines that were to reduce Paris and which require forty horses to draw them.

The armies of General Von Hoesingen and the Prince of Wurttemberg which headed toward Rothel and Mezieres, though part of this force is reported as still resisting at the south end of the forest of the Argonne.

Lorraine Free of Germans. It was reported last night that armies of the crown Prince of Bavaria and General Von Heringer had been forced across the frontier and that the entire territory of French Lorraine had been liberated. This disposition of the German armies confirmed, makes another concentration as suggested by certain critics, impossible. It leaves Generals Von Kluck and Von Baulou hotly pursued by the allies and menaced by an enveloping movement on the left and with little hope of reinforcement except perhaps from the sixty thousand troops which occupy Belgium.

Belgians Again Active. The latest news from Antwerp however, shows that these are likely to be needed there to stand off the offensive movement taken by King Albert's army. Taken all together, the situation here is viewed with equanimity and the government is busy itself with ways and means for reviving trade and commerce.

Tells of First Advance. London, Sept. 14.—A high official just returned from the northern region of France, says a dispatch to Reuters telegraph company from Paris gives details of the advance of the Germans through France before they were repulsed. He said the enemy passed through Toulons, Roubais, Lille, Douai, Arras and Amiens with extreme rapidity and met with little resistance which explains the leniency displayed toward these towns in the manner of war levying.

Several Towns Suffer. Everywhere the Germans appealed to the civil authorities promising to respect the lives of the inhabitants if no active possibility was committed against their soldiers. They arrived in Lille on September 2, and left on the 5th.

The department of the Aisne suffered heavily especially in the north. Gules was entirely devastated after three separate attacks during which 12,000 shells fell into the town. St. Quentin suffered heavily and is also resisted and delayed the enemy's advance to Soissons.

Official London Report. London, Sept. 14.—The official press bureau this afternoon issued the following:

"All day yesterday the enemy disputed the passage of the Aisne by our troops but in spite of difficulty of forcing the river in the face of a strong opposition, nearly all the crossings were secured by sunset."

"On our right and left the French troops were confronted with a similar task in which, like ourselves, they were successful. Many more prisoners were taken."

"It is reported from French headquarters that the German Crown Prince's army had been driven back and that he had moved his headquarters from St. Menchould to Mont Faucon."

Half Million Fresh Troops. A dispatch to the Times from Paris says:

"The general commander in Paris has a half million fresh troops under his control which will be used presumably in pursuing the enemy."

"News of the German force from Mont-A-Mousson to St. Die are falling back, shows that the five German armies in Moselle are retreating."

The difficulties of the retreating army and they are good chances that the allies may annihilate before they reach the frontier. The Germans seem to be abandoning their natural route, the valley of the Oise, endeavoring to withdraw further eastward to the barren and difficult country of the Champagne, where the roads are poor and provisions scarce."

ALLIES IN ADVANCE AS GERMANS RETREAT

U. S. Army Men at Battle Front Wire Washington of Success of Allies in Paris District.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Official reports from the American military observers in France confirmed other reports of the advance of the allied army and the retreat of the Germans.

"The feeling of confidence in the success of the allies is reported as widespread, that within a radius of fifty kilometers of Paris, refugees who deserted the villages and towns in fear of attack are now returning to their homes."

The French commissariat is reported working in perfect order and ammunition trains are keeping the front supplied with regularity.

RED CROSS BANNER ABUSE BY GERMANY

Asquith Tells Commons of Official Reports of Atrocities Reported Weeks Ago.

London, Sept. 14.—Lord Asquith told the house of commons today that no official information has been received from the ministry of war concerning the repeated stories that German soldiers had abused the Red Cross flag, killed and maimed the wounded and killed women and children.

WILL MAKE ARREST ON FORGERY CHARGE

Sheriff Will Bring Peter Hilden From New Glarus to Answer for Crime Said to Have Been Committed Here.

Sheriff C. S. Whipple, armed with a state warrant, left this morning for New Glarus to arrest Peter Hilden, wanted in Janesville on the charge of forgery to the amount of five dollars from J. W. Tuttle of the Hide and Leather company. The warrant was issued on March 7 but it was not until Saturday that trace of the alleged forger could be found by the authorities.

Sunday the chief of police at New Glarus, knowing of the charge against Hilden, apprehended him and phoned to Sheriff Whipple, who ordered the man held until his arrival with the warrant. On March 6 it is alleged Hilden passed a worthless check on the bank of Albany at the Tuttle store for five dollars, although Mr. Tuttle at first refused to accept the check, not knowing Hilden.

It is reported that Hilden is also wanted by the Madison police for forging other checks for small amounts on Madison merchants. Sheriff Whipple is expected to return with his prisoner this evening.

REPORT SURRENDER OF AUSTRIAN ARMY

CAPITULATION OF FRANCIS JOSEPH'S TROOPS TO RUSSIANS RUMORED AT PETROGRAD.

GERMAN AID TO FORT

Fear for Preservation of Northern Frontier Stimulates Sending Troops to Baltic Port.

London, Sept. 14.—A dispatch from Paris to Reuters' Telegram company says:

"A telegram from Petrograd to the Matin states that persistent rumors are current there that the larger part of the Austrian armies capitulated yesterday."

Germans Reinforce Mamel. Paris, Sept. 14.—A Havas dispatch from Petrograd says that the Germans are sending important reinforcements to the fortress of Mamel, the northernmost town of the German empire on the Baltic, 72 miles northeast of Koenigsberg, which threatens Tilsit.

The Russian imperial council is examining the laws for the administration of conquered Prussian and Austrian territory.

Russians at Koenigsburg. Paris, Sept. 14.—In a dispatch from Petrograd the correspondent of the Havas agency says it had been announced in the Russian capital that a Russian army is now before Koenigsburg in East Prussia.

More Russian Successes. Paris, Sept. 14.—In a dispatch from Petrograd to the Havas agency says a official communication declares that the Russian successes in Galicia are continuing.

Servians Continue Offense. Nish, Servia, Sept. 14.—The Servian offensive movement continues successfully on the left bank of the Save. No important development along the lower Drina have been reported since the Servian victory Sept. 5th.

GERMANS IN CLOVER BUT GET CAPTURED

Wounded Frenchman Returning From Battle Tells of Trick of William's Infantrymen.

Paris, Sept. 14.—A number of trains arrived at the northern and eastern stations early today bringing German projectiles, ammunition, aeroplanes, etc., captured from the enemy. Among the wounded arriving at the eastern station was a sergeant of Moslimir. He saw a number of German soldiers made prisoners in a field of yellow clover. The forage had been cut in sheaves and when one of the sheaves had been seen to move, a shot fired into it brought out a German infantryman. A second shot fired into another sheaf brought another German out, and it was found that all other sheaves concealed soldiers. All were easily captured.

CHICAGO WHEAT PIT IN HEAVY DECLINE

Retreat of Germans and Rumor of Russian at Ostend Causes Falling Off in Sales.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—The late dealings today the decline in the wheat market became more severe, amounting to eight and a half cents a bushel, compared with Saturday night. Disappointment over the comparative smallness of the export demand today had a weakening effect and so also did assertions that reinforcements from Russia had been landed at Ostend. Reports from the general German retreat also tended to give the impression that the war would be of shorter duration than had been expected, and this gave strength to the bears.

Closing prices were semi-penny at losses varying from 6 to 8 1/2 cents net. Sept. 1, 1914, Dec. 1, 1914, May 1, 1915.

COMMERCIAL CLUB HOLDS REGULAR MEETING TODAY

The first of the regular weekly meetings of the directors of the Commercial club took place this noon at the Grand Hotel. L. A. Markham, Rock county secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was the guest speaker and gave a very interesting talk on the corn contest, which is being conducted by the Commercial club. Mr. Markham gave an idea of the feeling of the farmers in connection with the corn contest and of the splendid effect of such an enterprise. Secretary McDowell was instructed to write both Congressman Cooper and Senator La Follette protesting against the proposed war tax levy of 3% on all freight shipments. Several factory propositions which had been investigated were found not to be fit to bring here for various reasons.

"War Is"

A wall of bayonets shuts off the imports of Europe. Armies march through fields and vineyards. Millions of industrious producers have suddenly turned into destroyers.

It is American opportunity. We must feed and clothe the world. We must be at work at once. If materials are missing because we leaned on Europe we must supply them by our own brains and skill. It is no time for timidity. It is time to be bold—constructive, daring and aggressive.

War is America's opportunity. Get busy.

RUSS REINFORCING BELGIUM IN FIELD

Confirmation of Rumor of Czar's Troops in Country is Made Today—Germans Halted.

London, Sept. 14.—In a dispatch from Ghent the correspondent of the Daily News says that after two days of investigation he has confirmed the statement that Russian troops are in Belgium.

The Figaro, a Paris newspaper, announced that General von Goltz, governor of the occupied Belgium district, visited Antwerp provided with a safe conduct and made proposals to the Belgian government with a view to reaching an agreement. The Belgian government refused to consider the proposals.

Afternoon papers of Ghent, the correspondent said, published last Saturday's statement as follows:

"The German army has been cited at Countenberg, between Brussels and Louvain, by a Belgian army reinforced by Russian troops."

"But where these Russians are and what their numbers may be, it would be indelicate to tell," he said.

Continuing, the correspondent mentioned the possibility that the Russian is not the only army reinforcing the Belgians.

INDIA'S UPRISING DENIED BY LONDON

British Foreign Office Denies Washington Emphatic Denial of Revolution in East.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The British foreign office today called to the British embassy here an emphatic denial of the reports of a revolution in India. The dispatch says:

"The story of a revolution in India which have been given out by German legations in certain capitals, is sheer invention. The enthusiasm in India with regard to the war, is most striking. All parties, political organizations of all parties as well as the general population are offering striking proofs of their loyalty to the British empire; offers of military and financial support have been made and are being gratefully accepted by his majesty's government. Additional evidence is received daily of the loyalty of the Indian public bodies and people of India."

Has New Evidence IN AURORA MURDER

Second Petras Trial For Holland Girl Killing Opens Today—Prosecutor Confident.

Aurora, Ill., Sept. 14.—The second trial of Anthony Petras, accused of slaying Theresa Holland, who was clubbed to death in a cemetery here last February, was begun before Judge D. F. Carnes at Geneva today. The first trial resulted in a disagreement. States Attorney Myers asserted he had found evidence with which he hoped to convict Petras. A death sentence will be asked, the prosecutor said.

SUFFS COMING WEST; WILSON RULE RILES

Washington, Sept. 14.—Bearing the national and suffrage colors, a special car carrying women campaign seekers left here over the Pennsylvania railroad today for the middle west. A part for various states where suffrage campaigns are being waged.

"The plan," declared Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the union, "is for the women of the east to appeal to the women voters of the west to withhold their support from the national democratic party until that party ceases blocking the national suffrage amendment."

London, Sept. 14.—An showing how northwestern France has been cleared of the invaders, the president of the chamber of commerce at Rouen today telegraphed to Lloyd's as follows:

"The port of Rouen is now able to take coal-laden steamers from Rouen to Paris, the river navigation now being free."

ALLIES WIN INITIAL STAGE OF BIG CLASH

FRENCH AND BRITISH ARE UNMISTAKABLY VICTORIOUS AFTER TERRIFIC FIGHT.

"BATTLE OF THE AGES"

Supreme and Climatic Battle of War Expected Shortly As German Forces Are Still Intact.

London, Sept. 14.—The first stage of the battle of the Marne which from the numbers of fighting men engaged, the extent of the line of battle and the terrific slaughter perhaps correctly described as "the battle of the ages," appears to have been won by the French and British armies, but the main German army is still intact and the supreme clash is still to come.

Desperate Battles Coming. The present week may see even more desperate encounters than any that have yet taken place. Metz, the capital of Lorraine, and the chain of forts extending to Dadenhoff on the Moselle, seventeen miles north of Metz, form a strong pivot for the German army, and the river courses and the dense forests on the frontier, together with the strategic roads, give the German army of invasion now in retreat, a splendid opportunity for defensive action, should the French pursuit extend this far.

Foresee Grave Possibilities. Military observers foresee all kinds of perplexing possibilities in the event of the Germans regaining the position they held before they started the rush of 1,500,000 men on Paris, particularly should they succeed in taking back any large portions of their losses.

Allies Claim Big Victory. London, Sept. 14.—"Incontestable" (the adjective used by General Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French forces, in describing the victory achieved by the allies along the western battle front) The latest communication from Paris states that the advance is continuing all along the line across the river Aisne.

Little news, other than that of the vague sort, filtered through from Germany regarding the operations in the west, though it is evident from the tone of Berlin official statements that the people are being warned not to be too optimistic as later reverses may be expected. The latest news from Berlin describes a sortie from Paris on Sept. 6, which it is stated has been repulsed.

Austrians Hard Pressed. Dispatches from many sources including Vienna, indicate that the Austrians are in a sore straits, but the story of its complete destruction is evidently exaggerated, as the latest Russian reports indicate that the Russian troops are still meeting with organized resistance. It is evident, however, from the disposition of the combatants, that the Austrian center was coupled up while the left wing was hurried back into the marshes of the river San. This left wing, composed of the flower of the Austrian troops, may be caught in a trap, making unconditional surrender the only alternative to destruction.

Russ Retreat in Prussia. The official statement given out in Petrograd says that General Rennenkampf in east Prussia, is stubbornly retreating before a superior force rather than risk the turning of his left flank by the German army.

The Belgian mobile force has turned to its Antwerp base with the official explanation that it has served its purpose in checking German reinforcements from joining the army in France.

Vienna Panic Stricken. A dispatch to the Central News from Petrograd, dated Sunday, says it is reported from Bucharest that a panic epidemic is sweeping over the news of the capture of Semlin by the Servians and the thousands of unemployed are parading the streets in a state of despair. The military situation is not so gloomy as it appeared to be and even the food supplies proved to be insufficient and as a result the third levee of reservists are going to the frontier in civilian attire.

REPORTER'S STORY PROVES TO BE MYTH

LaCrosse Physician Proves "Seven Dead Men" Are Hay Clinkers Solving Reporter's Mystery.

La Crosse, Wis., Sept. 14.—The death of seven men in a burning barn on the Goddard marsh, a scene which was described vividly by reporters here has proved a myth and Dr. R. B. Flynn, county physician, was the man who upset the report.

As telegraphed all over the country the story was that seven men, probably railroad laborers, were burned to death as they slept in a barn. The reporter went so far as to partially identify one man and state that county authorities had recovered seven charred bodies.

The bodies were—hay clinkers. Dr. Flynn looked over the mass supposed to represent the bodies of seven men and immediately announced that there was not a bone in the barn. The hay in burning, he used in grotesque shapes, some of which resembled human bones and that was all.

Positive proof that the story was a myth came when the physician dissolved some of the "bones" in acid.

"Any farmer who has had a barn burn knows what hay clinkers will do," said the doctor.

Belgian soldiers firing over barricades in Willebroeck Station near Malines.

As the bulk of the German army stationed in Belgium has been drawn off to aid the main German armies in France and Prussia, the Belgian army has taken heart and is again active. The Belgians were at first overwhelmed by numbers, but the fighting in that country from now on is likely to be an even contest. This photo was taken in Willebroeck Station near Malines, where a skirmish took place between 800 Uhlans and 150 Belgians.

On Wednesday night, September 10th, "Sledgehammer" Kloskey, the black and white giant miner of Cuba City, will box Art Nelson of Sparta, Wis., in a ten round "come back" battle at Plattville. Kloskey met Nelson previously, but was forced to retire early in the match, because of a broken rib, this being the first time that he had not been able to knock out. Four minor preliminaries will be staged. Young Scotty, the Jones Islander feather, was scheduled to meet Kid DeLoe in the semi-main event, but DeLoe later refused to meet the Jones Islander.

His Time Had Come. Again that ringing in his ears! It was the warning he had dreaded. He knew his time had come. Yet, although he had started at the sound, he seemed half-dazed and wholly careless of the consequences. But still the ringing in his ears! "Drat it!" he finally said, and springing from bed the careworn commuter shut off the alarm clock and proceeded to dress for the 7:10 train.—Fuck.

RELIGION NEGLECTED BY NEUTRAL PERSONS

"MANY PEOPLE ARE NEITHER FOR NOR AGAINST GOD," SAYS REV. HENRY WILLMANN.

CHANGE OFTEN COMES

Too Many Resort to Inclination and Not the Will.—Christ Separates the Good from the Bad.

In analyzing religion and its adherents Rev. Henry Willmann took the opportunity Sunday morning in his sermon at the Trinity Episcopal church to discriminate and pick out the party that is neither religious nor irreligious, when speaking of a relationship between them and God and His church.

"Many people are not religious, but in many cases you could not call these people irreligious," began the speaker. "They are neither for nor against God. They are neutral. Oftentimes they say their prayers, except His teachings, and they have no doubts or perplexities, but they are not religious. Other members of this same class will hundreds of times be found standing idle, with God's will not influencing them a little, and after all, will be soon discovered that these people are neither for nor against religion."

"After realizing no real knowledge of the supernatural, or no power in a prayer, they are forced to accept His call. It comes like a flash, as though the party had awakened from dreamland. It is an awakened call, coming at an inspired moment, at a supreme moment, when the individual is asked by Him to go and work in His vineyard. But how long will this change last? There is always a possibility of the individual going back to his old life, the neutral life."

"Then there is that change from the religious life to the neutral life. Can it be too much religion? The individual deteriorates and does not do what he ought to do, even though he knows what he should do.

"There are, too, people who do not obey at once the call of God. They have a middle way of doing things, and through this method many lose themselves, while some accept after careful consideration. The call of God looks stern in the face of many who are timid to face the supernatural."

"There are still persons that are certain of doing one thing, but fall in their efforts. They testify that they will do that particular thing and then turn around and oppose that statement. In religion, a person may testify to God that he will obey Him, but then turn against the Divine, and scorn him utterly. On the other hand, the one who refused to obey Him, is the likely candidate to succeed the former who rejected.

"There is a reason for all this uprising in religion and in attempting to reach the religious height. The will does not act in any one case mentioned. Inclination, bias or prejudice can be said to be most truthfully the cause of the coming of Christ to a person brings out only the inclination and not the character of the individual. A bad man may have had good intentions, but he failed to obey, while good persons having good intentions, have answered only through inclination and remain neutral. The coming of Christ separates the good from the bad, the wise from the foolish and the strong from the weak."

Rev. Willmann described the various examples here mentioned in a distinct and interesting manner, and the address was the most compelling as well as instructive.

Whitewater News

REV. SARLES PREACHED LAST SERMON SUNDAY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Whitewater, Sept. 13.—Rev. Jesse E. Sarles preached his last sermon as pastor of the Congregational church here yesterday. It was not a farewell sermon, as he does not believe in them, but he wished to show that Christian civilization is not a failure because the nations of the world are now at one another's throats. He showed that Christianity has changed many of the horrors which were a part of war in the early centuries. He even stated that the nations are called Christian nations, but in fact, no nation has ever yet tried Christianity. Even individual citizens have not tried Christianity, and he stated that they are worthy to bear the name Christian. He said it was too early yet to tell whether or not the war is a misfortune, but he believes that good will result in the overthrow of monarchy, and a deeper conception of the spirit of the Christ will prevail. The Sarles family expect to leave for their new home in Madison next Thursday.

Miss Mildred Averill started yesterday morning for Riverside, California, where she will resume her work as German instructor in the high school. Miss Charlotte Wood of Appleton teaches Whitewater last night to teach German another year in the normal school which opens today. She will have rooms in the home of Mrs. Martha Shepard on North Prairie street.

Miss Amelia Kuhnnehn came Saturday to take up her work in the school for rural education at the normal. Her friends are glad she is able to return after her illness and absence of six months.

Mrs. A. M. Leland returned Friday from Charlevoix, Mich., where she went to escape hay fever about a month ago.

G. Kestel went to Waukegan on Friday.

Mrs. John K. Tassin and little daughter, Thelma, returned Monday after spending a month with relatives at Salem, South Dakota, and several Iowa points. Mrs. Tassin's stepmother died at Salem while she was there.

Mrs. Albert Salisbury has received word from her daughter, Mrs. Isaac Peterson of Chicago, that a little dark-eyed child, three years old, has been adopted into their hearts and home.

The three children of Mrs. A. L. Kranz are to be cared for by the Wisconsin State Home Finding society. D. D. Richardson, who has charge of them on Friday. He states there are not enough children to go around; that there are more homes than children. The society of placing a little child in the home of a lady who herself was placed in a good home twenty years ago.

Game Warden Elliott spoiled a feast which two Italians had planned for Sunday. They had shot two mourning doves which had scarcely fallen to the ground before the alert warden was on the spot. When taken before Justice P. C. Kizer and fined they were too poor to meet the demand, but the sight of the jail doors revived their memories, so that they paid up and escaped the clink of the bars.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Loomer have tonight for Estherville, Iowa, where Mr. Loomer will engage in county engineering. They have been located in Canada for the past year, but the war has stopped so much work that it seemed best to return to the states. They came from Chicago last Friday to stay over Sunday with the Charles Loomer family.

TWO SATURDAY DRUNKS ARRAIGNED IN COURT

Matt Bradley made a forced call in the municipal court this morning and the cost him twenty-five dollars and costs. He was arrested Saturday night for being intoxicated and when arraigned in court the second offense charge was pressed against him as he has been in the habit of calling on the municipal court at regular intervals.

Bradley pleaded guilty and a sentence was passed, taxing him ten days flat jail sentence, fifteen dollars and costs or twenty additional days. He put up an entreaty plea to escape the ten-day jail term and his fine was raised to twenty-five dollars without the sentence.

Eng Hoveland was also charged with the second offense count, but unlike Bradley, Hoveland insisted he was not guilty and asked for a jury trial to ascertain what really drunk meant. His examination was set for the sixteenth and Hoveland was committed to the county jail until that time, being unable to furnish the five hundred dollars bail set by Judge H. L. Maxwell.

JUDGE "IKE" KAREL IS CAUGHT SPEEDING

Democratic Nominee For Governor of Wisconsin Falls Into Clutches of Cop at Delavan Lake.

It makes no difference who you are, the motorcycles cops hired to guard the two mile road between the city of Delavan and the lake, are going to get you. Judge "Ike" Karel, democratic nominee for governor of Wisconsin, fell into the clutches of the police early last week and was taken up before Judge Rodman, who warned him severely against the evils of auto speeding. After a sensational lecture in court, the judge allowed "Ike" to take up his journey homeward. It appears that Karel was driving at a speed better than 25 miles an hour, which is the state law limit outside of any city limits. He was driving from the city to the lake when taken into custody.

FARM NEAR BELOIT HAS BIG FIRE LOSS

All Buildings on E. R. Graves Place, With Exception of House, Wiped Out by Flames.

All the barns and outbuildings on the E. R. Graves farm, three miles southeast of Beloit, were totally destroyed by fire which broke out in the large stock barn at ten o'clock last night. Fanned by the wind the flames quickly spread to the other buildings so that it was impossible to save their contents. The brilliant illumination attracted hundreds of persons to the scene, many coming from Beloit in automobiles. With the help of these spectators the house was saved. Three horses were burned and the season's harvest of hay and grain was lost.

ESCAPES SEVERE INJURY ON INTERURBAN TRAILER
Through the alertness of Prof. Geo. Curtis, instructor at the Janesville high school, and several other passengers, Martin Kennedy was saved from a fall off the rear platform of the six o'clock interurban car. Sunday afternoon that would probably have resulted in serious injuries. While the car was traveling at a high rate of speed, Kennedy was thrown against the rear gate, which gave way, falling the youth was able to obtain a slight hold on a brace which saved him for the moment. The gate being struck by a post, swung back with great force, forcing Kennedy to release his hold on the brace. Prof. Curtis grabbed the young man's coat and held him in the perilous position until bystanders pulled him back onto the platform.

A badly bruised hand, a lost hat and a bad fright for all concerned comprised the damages.

FOOTBALL REPLACING BASEBALL IN SPORTS

COACHES DRILLING GRIDIRON HEROES FOR SEASON'S SCHEDULES THIS WEEK.

COACHES ARE WORKING

Dope on Baseball Shows no Major League Team Has Yet Copped Pennant Four Times Straight.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Sept. 14.—Another set of mobilizing orders are being issued today for the football coach is ready for the initial maneuvering lined with the white marks lacking dummies to lead and headed uniforms taken from gymnastic lockers and store rooms. Soon veteran and novice will meet upon the practice field and the football coach will come into his own again.

That he is an important factor in the popular college sport is shown by the fact that more than 20 per cent of the schools and colleges supporting football teams employ one or more coaches in the individual and collective development of the players. In a majority of cases the coach is a former player who gained fame as a gridiron star at either the college where he now coaches or at some other university. Players from institutions that have been repressed for a period of some years are most frequently in demand since the belief prevails that as coach they will incorporate the same system and methods.

At the present time there are more than five hundred former players acting as coaches for school and college teams. Eliminating from this list all the more prominent institutions of the country an analysis shows that players from Yale and Pennsylvania are most popular as coaches. These two universities are tied with fifteen each. Dartmouth, Michigan, Princeton, Wisconsin and Chicago follow in the order named and these are closely followed by Harvard, Syracuse, Notre Dame, Vanderbilt, Williams, Ohio State and Minnesota. At the head of the list will be found some of the most famous names in the history of the game, such as Walter Camp, who coached at Yale and Harvard, and who has held the coaching stick at Harvard for the past twenty years, is almost as chary of speech. Both, however, know football from every angle. They are hard drivers as they were players and do not fear to tell the candidates for the coaching stick that they are not good enough to play.

Their charge know that every man will get a fair chance to make the team and the final selection made on merit alone. On football tactics, however, Harvard and Yale differ widely. Harvard teams late in November will know and play football of the highest caliber.

Dope on Pennants.

These baseball fans and prospects who have been forecasting the return of the pennant to the New York Giants for the past year in the National League, under Manager John J. McGraw, the New York club has this season captured its first pennant in the National League since 1907. This is the first time in the history of the league that a team has won the pennant in succession by any club in the National or American League and those who pin their faith to the New York Giants will not prove disappointed.

Their contention appears to be based on the records for since 1907 the club has won more than three pennants in a row. The Chicago Cubs under Captain Anson won the championship in 1904-5. Boston won the league in 1913 and not until 1914 did the Boston club under Frank Chance win a triple win which carried them through 1892 and 1893. Baltimore won in 1894-5. Under Manager McGraw, the New York club has won three pennants in succession. Beginning in 1911 the New York club has won the National League pennant in the world's series each year.

The American League representative, the Boston Red Sox, won the triple win is found in the league records which go back to 1907. In 1907-8-9 the Detroit Tigers under Hughie Jennings won the league pennant but in each year were defeated in the world's series by the National League contender, who believe in tradition, the failure of Anson, Seale, McGraw and Jennings and the machines they built up.

McGraw and the Giants will be the favorites in the National League.

HIT IN THE NINTH GIVES LOCALS WIN OVER ALBANY NINE

Cardinals' Nose Out Victory Over Tillie's Band From Albany By Seven to Six Score.

A bit in the ninth, saves time—and the game. A neat single by Hall with two men down in the last inning with Berger resting on third, won the game for the Janesville Cardinals Sunday afternoon when the Cardinals downed the Albany team by a six to seven score. The game, played before a large crowd, was full of thrills and excellent defensive work by the Janesville team.

Nate Tillie was on the firing line for the visitors but lacked power to keep the Cards from spanking the ball in the time of need. The Albany pitcher had plenty of crooked stuff on the ball for the Cardinals, but when he attempted to sneak a straight one across the Cards could have been convicted on the charge of murdering the pill without a jury trial. Doubles and triples were garnered off the former wizard's delivery of the Cards' swatsmen. Poor defensive work by the Albany nine put Tillie in the hole several times during the matinee and as luck would have it, when runners were on bases some batter would give the ball a lusty kick scoring a bevy of runs.

Cackel of Madison was on the mound for the Cardinals. While he had plenty of steam and hooks for a southpaw artist, he was short on control walking six and puncturing two batters in the ribs during the first five innings. In the pinches the home crew were right on the job, two double plays, a stellar catch by Nehr and a couple of swell assists by Johnson saved off defeat and opened the avenue to victory. Coupled with the fielding work was the batting of the Cards for in the third inning Tillie must have been under the impression the troops of the Kaiser were attacking. Early with sixteen-inch guns, for Porter, Hall and Nehr drove out extra base wallops in order scoring three runs. Johnson in the eighth handed Tillie another jolt when he poked out his second hit for a double. Albany scored, two hits, two runs, putting the initial run over the rubber. In the third Albany got gold and when Cackel walked two and hit the third man, the visitors scored two more. Their joy was short lived for the Cards made a bluff assault on the Cardinals' fortifications and Nehr was safe on an error to start the proceedings. Porter doubled after Sullivan had whiffed and both runners were scored on Hall's two-base wallop. Nehr finished things up with the third two-base hit in the ninth.

Albany came back in the fourth and went into the lead duplicating the Cardinals' feat in scoring three tallies in one inning. Four hits mixed with two free passes to first and a boot put the visitors in the front. Tillie gave the visitors a one run lead which they held until the seventh. Cackel was improving as the game progressed and after the fourth Albany baserunners viewed home base only from the outer circuit. Berger tied the count, but the Cardinals' defense was too good for him. Nehr and Tillie were vanquished and the Cardinals one step nearer to the title of Southern Wisconsin.

Two base hits—Berger, Porter, Hall, 2; Nehr, Johnson and Tillie, three base hits, Porter.

Around the Circuit.

With Cranford on the mound, the game would have been easy meat for the Cards, but the Milton college twirler at the last moment phoned that he would be unable to pitch. A hurry-up call to Madison brought Cackel down for duty.

Tillie failed to show his old time form Sunday's game, but the support that was given him would not encourage any pitcher to break any records. The visitors' outfield failed to go after the ball and take chances resulting in hits that should have been fly outs.

Johnson, the new outfielder played an excellent game at second, fielding good and besides driving out two hits that helped.

Porter was the batting kid yesterday for in five trips to the plate he caught a runner at second before the latter could scamper back to the base.

Porter made the best catch of the day when he hung onto a short Texas leaguer back of short stop after a long run and dive to get the out.

Next Sunday the Cardinals play the Racine state league nine at the Association Park diamond.

It was reported the deciding game.

DALTON MAKING GOOD ON CARROLL ELEVEN

Waukesha College Football Squad Have Secured Good Man in "Motsy"—Atwood Try-ing Out.

Word coming from the Carroll college football camp, now being conducted at Lake, near Waukesha, brings the good news that "Motsy" Dalton, the sturdy athlete at the Janesville high school for three years, is rapidly gaining prominence on the Carroll eleven, after but one week of practice.

It is reported that Dalton is being shifted in the various backfield positions, his most successful position being at half, while his work at full back is by no means being overlooked by the coach. Dalton has many friends and acquaintances in this city, who will be anxious to see him make good.

Edward Atwood, two years basketball star, and a man with some football ability returned home Friday evening after several days spent with the Carroll squad. He has a fighting chance to make the squad, as he is considered a fast end. With a little coaching he should prove a valuable man at Carroll. The camp breaks up at Phantom on Monday, after which the squad will transfer their training to Waukesha, to patch up the rough spots in the team in preparation for the hard schedule ahead.

SATURDAY PRACTICE A BENEFIT TO SQUAD

Hopeful Aspirants of High School, Numbering 25, Were Out to Master Rudiments.

The Janesville high school 1914 football candidates turned out Saturday afternoon in goodly numbers to engage in two hours of good stiff drill given them by Coach Curtis. It was the second practice of the year. At least twenty-five candidates, some in uniforms, worked to the best of their ability in the presence of thirty or more onlookers.

Captain Stewart was used at quarterback, in trials at passing the ball to backfield men. He showed signs of speed and accuracy. Punting, line charging, both offensive and defensive, warding off opponents, falling on the ball, and forward passes were rehearsed. No tackling was attempted, Curtis having left that essential until this week. Regular practice was called for this afternoon at 4:15.

SATURDAY PRACTICE A BENEFIT TO SQUAD

Hopeful Aspirants of High School, Numbering 25, Were Out to Master Rudiments.

The Janesville high school 1914 football candidates turned out Saturday afternoon in goodly numbers to engage in two hours of good stiff drill given them by Coach Curtis. It was the second practice of the year. At least twenty-five candidates, some in uniforms, worked to the best of their ability in the presence of thirty or more onlookers.

Captain Stewart was used at quarterback, in trials at passing the ball to backfield men. He showed signs of speed and accuracy. Punting, line charging, both offensive and defensive, warding off opponents, falling on the ball, and forward passes were rehearsed. No tackling was attempted, Curtis having left that essential until this week. Regular practice was called for this afternoon at 4:15.

Madison League Will Retire at Season's End.

Madison will not be a member of the Wisconsin-Illinois league next season unless money can be raised to prevent a disastrous ending to the Capital city nine, which is now in sixth place. David Cantwell, treasurer of the club, Treasurer George Rier, Carl Hoebel and George Cary, the remaining directors of the club, will retire at the end of the present season.

The year has been nearly disastrous for old indebtedness has caused considerable trouble, causing a lean, if not empty treasury all the season.

Food From the Sea.

Nearly 5,750,000 crabs were landed in England and Wales last year, according to the annual report on sea fisheries, while over thirty-three million oysters between six and seven hundred thousand lobsters, and some twenty-six thousand tons of other shell-fish were taken.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE MOLOCH OF TODAY.

HERE is a certain bug-a-boo idol in existence today to which more happiness, comfort and money are sacrificed than ever went into the service of any old time deity.

And the name of this idol—you shall guess!

An old neighbor of ours who moved away from the town eight years ago came back on a visit the other day. When she left town she anticipated being very unhappy and homesick, so I asked her if she had grown to like her new home as well as I.

RUTH CAMERON

"I've liked it better," she said, "ever since the first homesickness wore off. And I think I shall tell you just why."

"As you probably remember, my husband had had business troubles for a year or two before we left and we were terribly hard up, more so than anyone realized. That was the trouble. We couldn't bear to have anybody realize how much we had to economize. And so we tried to keep up appearances. I used to sit up until one or two o'clock at night making clothes for the children and myself so that we could be just as well dressed as if I could afford to have the dressmaker and do all sorts of other things like that."

"Of course we economized to the bone wherever it didn't show but even then we were spending more than we should. The first of the month when the bills came in was terrible. I shall never forget how miserable Jack would look and how his voice would sound flat and queer. We had enough to live simply and happily on, but we couldn't do that. We had to strain every nerve to keep up appearances. I was fond of the old crowd and I hated to leave them. But I didn't realize what a miserable strain it had been living under, until we moved."

"We went to a city where we didn't know a soul and we had a flash of common sense and took a simple apartment that was within our means and lived accordingly. My dear, you can't imagine what a relief it was to be rid of that strain. It was like getting out to the country in the spring, or stretching when you have been in a cramped position for a long while. We made friends, lovely people, but mostly people who were the same income as we ourselves. We had to do without some luxuries, but we had the blizzards of luxury of not being afraid of the first of the month or of what anyone thought of us."

"We have more money than we did at first but we are not trying to keep up appearances. We are too busy being happy and getting the most real pleasure and comfort out of life to think how we appear. Of course we are tempted sometimes, but we remind each other that it doesn't pay. Jack had a chance to come back here but we wouldn't do it, because we were afraid we might drift back into the old way of life."

"As I said before, there is a certain bug-a-boo idol in existence today to which more happiness, comfort and money are sacrificed than ever went into the service of any neighbor deity."

And the name of that idol is "Keeping Up Appearances."

Heart and Home Problems

BY MRS. EDITH A. THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am eighteen years old and considered pretty. I weigh 150 pounds. Do you think that is too much?

(2) Will you tell me why it is that I have never had a steady fellow? I have had a lot of boys take me to and from places, but I never have had one for steady company. They don't seem to care for me.

(3) Do you think it is proper to let every fellow who takes you home kiss you good night?

(4) Is it right to let a boy hug and kiss you all he wants to when you are out with him? I don't allow this very much. Do you think that is why the boys don't seem to care for me?

(5) What is the best thing to talk about when dancing?

(6) Can you tell me anything to take away warts? I have them on my fingers.

(7) Can you give me a recipe for caramel filling for cake?

(8) Can you give me a recipe for cream puffs?

(9) Without knowing your height I cannot say, but unless you are very tall it is more than the average girl of eighteen weighs.

(10) I should not let the matter worry me, my dear; there is plenty of time for beaux later on. As you grow older you will become more interesting. Perhaps the boys you have in mind are not very much worth while. Look them over and see whether you are really missing much.

(11) No, anxiously.

(12) You have been making a great mistake and have been cheapening yourself by permitting them such liberties. I should not wonder if that were the reason why the boys lost interest in you so quickly.

(13) There are no special subjects that I know of. Be natural and talk of those things which are of interest to your partner. Avoid such stale topics as the weather, the music, the condition of the floor, etc. In the left to talk as a rule. If it is hard for you to converse, why do you not learn a lot of new steps. You will be popular in showing them to your friends, and conversation will come easier.

(14) Kerosene applied every day will dry them up and in time remove them. If this does not help, I will be glad to give you a more severe remedy.

(15) Caramel Filling—One and one-third cups sugar, two-thirds cup grated maple sugar, one-half cup butter, two-thirds cup cream. Mix ingredients and boil thirteen minutes. Beat until of right consistency to spread.

(16) Cream Puffs—Melt a half pound of butter in a pint of scalding water and when this boils stir in three-quarters pound of flour. Stir steadily for a minute or until the flour does not stick to the sides of the sauce pan. Remove from the fire. When the mixture is cool whip it with a mixer or three eggs beaten very light. Set on the fire for an hour. Line pans with buttered paper and drop the mixture by even spoonfuls at regular intervals far apart. Bake in a hot oven until the puffs are a golden brown. When cold, cut a slit in each and fill with a cream made by the following recipe.

Cream Puff Filling—Thicken a cup of hot milk with three tablespoons of flour wet to a paste with cold water. When it has boiled for a minute and the lumps are gone, remove from the fire and pour upon three eggs well beaten with a half cupful of powdered sugar. Stir over the fire to a thick smooth cream, remove, flavor with vanilla and when cold fill the puffs.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) There is a boy friend who promises me that he will marry me. I would kiss him if he would stop smoking cigarettes. I think he would keep his promise. I am over fourteen. Do I do right not to let him?

(2) Am I too old for my class? I am a freshman.

(3) Yes. (2) No.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

Is the average home diet apt to be monotonous? Do we have too many meals that the menu reads: Bread, butter, potatoes, and pie? This is a starchy meal and if served steadily colorless people will be the result in that family. Colorless in deeds as well as looks because the absence of meats or meat's equivalents will soon show in a family not given a well balanced ration.

A woman can do her family hardly any greater wrong than to serve the seed of ill health through insufficient nourishment. The ideally balanced meal is the one where protein, one or two starches, one bulky food, one mineral food, one fat besides butter, one sweet and one liquid besides water is served; the amount to be consumed being dictated by the appetite of the individual.

No one article of food contains all the necessary elements of nourishment in proper proportion, so the mixed diet is used to insure the proper correct meal. Some foods are too rich in protein; all animal foods are, while others have an excess of carbohydrate.

Combinations, such as bread and cheese, beans and bacon, potatoes and beef, all go to show how the surplus of carbohydrate or fat in the first, is made up by the excess of protein in the second article. A similar balance is struck when milk or eggs that are rich in protein are mixed with rice or bread which contain a surplus of carbohydrate. The use of the sauce with fish is another example.

Children are least capable of bearing the need of proper food. Oatmeal, milk, peas, beans, are not outside the average man's income, nor is rice, apricots or peaches. All these are first aids to a growing child and when properly cooked go far towards making a healthy child. As health is a child's heritage it rests with parents to see that they are given the right kind of food, that will enable them to keep this great gift.

If the average family doubled their milk supply they would be taking a long stride in the right direction and with a fair trial of using it as a food they would become convinced of its value and economy—for it is the very best brand of economy to use plenty of milk in a family of growing children.

To learn how to buy, what to buy, and when to buy it, may seem a simple task, but in reality it is a work that will take time and the help of part of every woman in the land, who must live on a limited income. As this class includes the larger percent of our women, everywhere the job of home maker and housekeeper is by no means small or unimportant.

To think your income so small that you should in justice be given a field glass to locate it as the more judiciously. Overcome the enemies of economy within yourself and you will have done much towards reaching the class of people who are earning for the days that lie ahead.

Are you saving one-tenth of your income?

THE TABLE.

Corn Bread—Dissolve one-half teaspoon of soda in two spoons of hot water; add to it one-half pint of sour milk; stir till it foams; beat two eggs yolks and add it to the milk, then one cup of cornmeal, one-half cup of flour, one-half teaspoon salt; beat well, then fold in the beaten whites. Bake in gem pans thirty minutes.

German Crullers—Beat two eggs without separating; add one-half cup of sugar; dissolve one-half teaspoon soda in a tablespoon water; add to it one-half pint of sour cream; add one teaspoon vanilla and some grated nutmeg; mix in three cups of flour; roll out and cut in crullers and fry in hot fat.

The Best of All Cakes—Dissolve one teaspoon of soda in one tablespoon of warm water; add one cup of corn cream, one-half cup of New Orleans molasses, one cup of brown sugar; stir till all mixed well; add three cups of flour, one teaspoon of cinnamon, one-half teaspoon grated, saltspoon of ginger; beat again. Then stir in one pound of raisins that have been floured. Put in bread pan and bake one hour. This is equal to most fruit cakes and does not contain eggs or butter. It should stand three or four days before cutting.

Grape Pie—Grape pie is a delicacy little appreciated. It is really equal to any other fruit pie. To make it, press grapes through a fine sieve, to remove seeds. Sweeten the pulp and use to fill a two-crust pie. The pie can be made with one crust, with a meringe, if desired.

Grape Dessert—Put grape pulp, prepared as for grape pie, into sherbet glasses. It should be chilled through. Pie whipped cream, like wise chilled through, on top and serve.

Grape Parfait—Boil one cupful of granulated sugar with a third of a cupful of water until it threads. Beat the white of two eggs and pour the syrup on them slowly, beating all the time until cold. In the meantime, wash a cupful of cream, whip through a sieve until it is a cupful of grape pulp, well sweetened, and the juice of a lemon. Fold the two mixtures together and freeze.

Grape Tapioca—This is sometimes called grape soup and can be served cold or hot in place of soup. It also makes a very dainty dessert and one that can be safely given to an invalid. To make it, press ripe grapes through a sieve until you have a quart. Simmer two cupfuls of water and a cupful of sugar until clear and then add the juice of a lemon and the grape pulp and juice. Add a tablespoonful of tapioca of the instantaneuous variety, or else tapioca that has been softened in cold water. Simmer all together until clear. Serve either hot or cold. If cold, shaved ice to it.

The KITCHEN CABINET

When the world hurts, then speedily we turn to one dear place, where love may not discern the worst that is within us; where we can find no entrance; all inviolate this spot from sorrow, and its sacred name is home—the harbor holding naught of blame.

—May Austin Law.

FOODS EN CASSEROLE.

The modern housewife knows that there are other ways of cooking food than by boiling, broiling or roasting all at high temperature. The long, slow cooking of foods in casserole best conserves the nutritive elements of food and the flavors that render it most agreeable, are better developed.

The earthen casserole with tight cover, plain or elaborate as the purse can buy, will hold the heat, cook food well, and if a late meal has to be served will keep the food hot. For the busy woman who has many cares and but one pair of hands to depend on, the casserole is invaluable. A dinner can be put to cook and left without watching. The best feature of all in casserole cookery is that it may be brought piping hot to the table.

Potatoes en Casserole—Melt a fourth of a cupful of butter or fat taken from the top of soup, in a frying pan. Have ready a quart of potato balls, cut with a French cutter, washed and drained. Turn the balls into the hot fat and shake about until they are well browned, and a grating of onion, a teaspoonful is plenty; then add soup stock to cover the potatoes, add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and cook in a moderate oven forty minutes. Turnips, carrots or artichokes are nice served this way.

Sweetbreads en Casserole—Let two pairs of sweetbreads stand an hour in water, changing several times, drain and cover with boiling water and simmer ten minutes, chill and remove all fiber, then draw into the best side a dozen lardoons of fat salt pork. Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan; in this brown the sweetbreads, taking care to brown the larded side but little. Lay the sweetbreads in a casserole, add real broth, salt and pepper a half cupful of carrots, celery and onion cut in bits, tied in a cloth to be removed. Just before serving add a half-cupful of thick cream.

Self-Reliant Home Doctors

Is what women are called who all over this broad land make their annual collections of roots and herbs, and rely upon recipes which our pioneer mothers found dependable for different family ailments. In one of these recipes Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had its origin and so successful has it proved that there is hardly a city, town or hamlet in America where some woman who has been restored to health by its use does not reside.

The Awakening of Peggy

Peggy Finds She Cannot Forget the Young Man She Met at the Party.

Real people, the kind we meet in everyday life, differ in many essential ways from the ideal characters of fiction. Peggy, a flesh and blood girl, is therefore farther from perfection than might be expected of an idealized girl.

The morning after the dancing party she was not on hand for breakfast with the family, despite her resolution to be an early riser. Her mother did not call her, thinking that Peggy might need some extra sleep. But Peggy was not sleeping while the rest were addressing their toast and eggs. She awoke at the usual time, recalled how interested she had been the night before in meeting Parker Condrey, and decided she would lie awhile and think over what had happened before getting up. Your average young girl knows no greater luxury than taking her ease irksome good resolutions get to seeming after they are two or three days old.

"Wonder if I'll really see him again," mused Peggy. "He said he'd like to see me, but you can't tell. Sometimes they mean it, and sometimes not. I suppose he told all the other girls the same thing."

Peggy went on to assure herself of the roving nature of men's interests, and told herself to be careful not to get too interested. But in spite of this good self-control, she found herself wondering what sort of frock would be most effective for their next meeting. She even thought of walking out in the afternoon on the chance that he might be passing the same way.

Then Peggy recalled that Parker Condrey was a young man who worked at a regular job, with few if any afternoons for strolling with girls. A glance at her little clock assured Peggy that he probably was on his way to work at this minute. He had started out to make good, she had heard, and trifling with time was not part of his program.

This reflection had a tonic effect on Peggy. She jumped out of bed, made a quick toilet, and presently surprised her mother by her keen interest in the morning's work.

Duel Was Called Off.

A young bachelor who was staying at a fashionable spa near Dreden was challenged to a duel by the husband of a young woman with whom he had flirted. The bachelor, who is an expert amateur boxer, replied that the challenge was accepted under the usual conditions—namely, choice of weapons. His choice was for four-ounce boxing gloves. The husband sent word that "the matter may now be considered as settled."

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Use molasses and alcohol to take out grass stains, and lemon juice with salt for mildew patches.

It is well to have your sheets and tablecloths folded with ways occasionally instead of length ways, as this prevents the fold from always coming in the same place and thus causing the place to wear out first.

A cement for broken china that is so strong that the article mended will not break in the same place again is made by dissolving half an ounce of gum arabic in two tablespoonfuls of boiling water, add plaster of paris until it is a thick paste.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Base-ball Guides Are Not Entirely Useful—

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons)

Rather idly, now, he drew a pad toward him and, taking up a pencil, made the figures seventeen and twenty-seven. Then he made the figures thirty-two and forty-two. He blacked them with repeated tracings as he mused. This done, he put seven under twenty-seven and thirty-two under twenty-two. He made the subtraction and studied the two tens. A swing door opened softly and his executive clerk reappeared with a soft tread.

"Some papers for your signature, sir," he said as he slipped them on the letter in front of Westerling. "And as 132d—no order about that, sir," is asked.

"None. It remains!" Westerling replied. The clerk went out impressed. His chief taking to sums of subtraction and totally preoccupied! The 132d to remain! He, too, had a question-mark in his secret mind.

Westerling proceeded with his mathematics. Having heavily shaded the lens, he essayed a sum in division. He found that ten went into seventy just seven times.

"One-seventh the allotted span of life!" he mused. "Take off fifteen years for youth and fifteen after fifty-five—nobody counts after that, though I mean to—and you have ten into forty, which is one-fourth. That is a good deal. But it's more to a woman than to a man—yes, a lot more to a woman than to a man!"

The clerk was right in thinking Westerling preoccupied; but it was not with the international crisis. Over his coffee the name of Miss Marta Gailand, in the list of arrivals at a hotel, had caught his eye in the morning paper. A note to her had brought an answer saying that her time was limited, but she would be glad to have him call at five that afternoon.

Westerling realized that the question of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he should become officially chief of staff with the retirement of His Excellency the field-marshal. For the present he enjoyed his position as a bachelor who was the most favored man in the army too much to think of marriage.

It was a little surprising that the bell that the girl of seventeen had rung in his secret mind when he was one of the first rounds of the ladder, now lost in the mists of a lower stratum of existence, should ever tickle again. Yet he had heard its note in the tone of her prophecy with each step in his promotion; and while the other people whom he had known at La Tir were the vaguest shadows of personalities, her picture was as definite in detail as when she said: "You have the will! You have the ambition!" She had recognized in him the power that he felt; foreseen his ascent to the very apex of the pyramid. She was still unmarried, which was stranger for she had not been bad-looking and she was of a fine old family. What was she like now? Commonplace and provincial, most likely. Many of the people he had known in his early days appeared so when he met them again. But, at the worst, he looked for an interesting half-hour.

The throbbing activity of the streets of the capital, as his car proceeded on the way to her hotel, formed an energetic accompaniment to his gratifying backward survey of how all his plans had worked out from the very day of the prophecy. Had he heard the remark of a great manufacturer to the banker at his side in a passing limousine, "There goes the greatest captain of industry of us all!" Westerling would only have thought: "Certainly. I am chief of staff. I am at the head of all your workmen at one time or another." Had he heard the banker's answer, "But pretty poor pay, pretty small dividends!" he would have thought: "Splendid dividends—the dividends of power!"

He had a caste contempt for the men of commerce, with their mercenary talk about credit and market prices; and also for the scientists, doctors, engineers, and men of other professions, who spoke of things in books which he did not understand. Reading books was one of the faults of Turcas, his assistant. No bookish soldier, he knew, had ever been a great general. He resented the growing power of these leaders of the civil world, taking distinction away from the military, even when, as a man of parts, he had to court their influence. His was the profession that was and ever should be the elect. A penniless subaltern was a gentleman, while he could never think of a man in business as one.

All the faces in the street belonged to a strange, busy world outside his interest and thoughts. They, formed what was known as the public, often making a clatter about things which they did not understand, when they should obey the orders of their superiors. Of late, their clatter had been about the extra taxes for the recent increase of the standing forces by another corps. The public was bovine when, as a man of parts, he had to court their influence. His was the profession that was and ever should be the elect. A penniless subaltern was a gentleman, while he could never think of a man in business as one.

As his car came to the park his eyes lighted at sight of one of the dividends—one feature of urban life that ever gave him a thrill. A battalion of the 128th, which he had ordered that afternoon to the very garrison at South La Tir that he had once commanded, was marching through the main avenue. Youths all, of twenty-one or two, they were in a muddy-gray uniform which was the color of the plain as seen from the veranda of the Gailand house. Where these came from were other boys growing up to take their places. The mothers of the nation were doing their duty. All the land was a breeding-ground for the dividends of Hedworth Westerling.

At the far side of the park he saw another kind of dividend—another group of marching men. These were not in uniform. They were the unemployed. Many were middle-aged, with worn, tired faces. Beside the flag of the country at the head of the procession was that of universal radicalism. And his car had to stop to let them pass. For an instant the indignation of military autocracy rose strong within him at sight of the national colors in such company. But he noted how naturally the men kept step; the solidarity of their movement. The stamp of their army service in youth could not be easily removed. He realized the advantage of heading an army in which defense was not dependent on a mixture of regulars and volunteers, but on universal conscription that brought every able-bodied man under discipline.

These reservists, in the event of war, would hear the call of race and they would fight for the one flag that then had any significance. Yes, the old human impulses would predominate and the only enemy would be on the other side of the frontier. They would be pawns of his will—the will that Marta Gailand had said would make him chief of staff.

Wasn't war the real cure for the general unrest? Wasn't the nation growing stale from the long peace? He was ready for war now that he had become vice-chief, when the retirement of His Excellency, unable to bear the weight of his years and decorations in the field, would make him the supreme commander. One ambition gained, he heard the appeal of another; to live to see the guns and rifles that had fired only blank cartridges in practice pouring out shells and bullets, and all the battalions that had played at sham war in maneuvers engaged in real war, under his direction. He saw his columns sweeping up the slopes of the Brown range. Victory was certain. He would be the first to lead a great modern army against a great modern army; his place as the master of modern tactics secure in the minds of all the soldiers of the world. The public would forget its unrest in the thrill of battles won and provinces conquered, and its clatter would be that of acclaim for a new idol of its old faith.

CHAPTER III.

The Second Prophecy. Marta, when she had received the note from Westerling, had been in doubt as to her answer. Her curiosity to see him again was not of itself compelling. The actual making of the prophecy was rather dim to her mind until he recalled it. She had heard of his rise and she had heard, too, things about him which a girl of twenty-seven can better understand than a girl of seventeen. His reason for wanting to see her he had said was to "renew an old acquaintance." He could have little interest in her, and her interest in him was that he was head of the Gray army. His work had intimate relation to that which the Marta of twenty-seven, a Marta with a mission, had set for herself.

A page came to tell Westerling that Miss Gailand would be down directly. When she appeared she crossed the room with a flowing, spontaneous vitality that appealed to him as something familiar.

"Ten years, isn't it?" she exclaimed as she seated herself on the other side of the tea-table. "And, let me see, you took two lumps, if I remember!" "None now," he said.

"Do you find it fattening?" she asked. He recognized the mischievous sparkle of the eyes, the quizzical turn of the lips, which was her asset in keeping any question from being personal. Nevertheless, he flushed slightly. "A change of taste," he averred. "Since you've become such a great man?" she hazarded. "Is that too strong?" This referred to the tea.

"No, just right!" he nodded. He was studying her with the polite, veiled scrutiny of a man of the world. A materialist, he would look a woman over as he would a soldier when he had been a major-general making an inspection. She was slim, supple; he liked slim, supple women. Yes, she was twenty-seven, with the vivacity of seventeen retained, though she was on the edge of being an old maid according to the conventional notions. Necks and shoulders that happened to be at his side at dinner, he had found, when they were really beautiful, were not averse to his glance of appreciative and discriminating admiration of physical charm. But he saw her shrug slightly and caught a spark from her eyes that made him vaguely conscious of an offense to her sensibilities, and he was wholly-conscious that the suggestion, bringing his faculties up sharply, had the pleasure of a novel sensation.

"How fast you have gone ahead!" she said. "That little prophecy of mine did come true. You are chief of staff!"

After a smile of satisfaction he corrected her.

"Not quite; vice-chief—the right-hand man of His Excellency. I am a buffer between him and the heads of divisions. This has led to the erroneous assumption which I cannot too forcibly deny—"

He was proceeding with the phraseology habitual whenever men or women, to flatter him, had intimated that they realized that he was the actual head of the army. His Excellency, with the prestige of a career, must be kept superficially enjoying the forms of authority. To arouse his jealousy, might curtail Westerling's actual power.

"Yes, yes!" breathed Marta softly, arching her eyebrows a trifle as she would when looking all around and through a thing or when she found any one beating about the bush. The little frown disappeared and she smiled understandingly. "You know I'm not a perfect goose!" she added.

"Had you been made chief of staff in name, too, all the old generals would have been in the sulks and the young generals jealous," she continued. "The one way that you might have the power to exercise was by proxy."

This downright frankness was another reflection of the old days before he was at the apex of the pyramid. Now it was so unusual in his experience as to be almost a shock. On the point of arguing, he caught a mischievous, delightful "Isn't that so?" in her eyes, and replied:

"Yes, I shouldn't wonder if it were!" Why shouldn't he admit the truth to the one who had rung the bell of his secret ambition long ago by recognizing in him the ability to reach his goal? He marvelled at her grasp of the situation.

"It wasn't so very hard to say, was it?" she asked happily, in response to his smile. Then, her gift of putting herself in another's place, while she strove to look at things with his purpose and vision, in full play, she went on in a different tone, as much to herself as to him: "You have labored to make yourself master of a mighty organization. You did not care for the non-essentials. You wanted the reality of shaping results."

"Yes, the results, the power!" he exclaimed. "Fifteen hundred regiments!" she continued thoughtfully, looking at a given point rather than at him. "Every regiment a blade which you would bring to an even sharper edge! Every regiment a unit of a harmonious whole, knowing how to screen itself from fire and give fire as long as hidden, in answer to your will if war comes! That is, what you live and plan for, isn't it?" (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Europe's Armageddon and the Last War

By H. G. WELLS

Copyright, 1914, by H. G. WELLS.

The drowned were under water that morning. Only here and there did a dead cow or a stiff figure still clinging stoutly to a box or chair or scullion buoy hint at the hidden massacre. It was not till the Thursday that the dead came to the surface in any quantity. The view was bounded on every side by a gray mist that closed overhead in a gray canopy. The air cleared in the afternoon, and then, far away to the west under great banks of steam and dust, the flaming red eruption of the atomic bombs became visible across the waste of water.

They showed that and sullen through the mist, like London sunsets. "They sat upon the sea," says Barnet, "like frayed out water lilies of flame." Barnet seems to have spent the morning in rescue work along the track of the canal, in helping people who were adrift, in picking up derelict boats and in taking people out of imperiled houses. He found other military barges similarly employed, and it was only as the day wore on and the immediate appeals for aid were satisfied that he thought of food and drink for his men and what course he had better pursue. They had a little cheese, but no water. "Orders," that mysterious direction, had at last altogether disappeared. He perceived he had now to act upon his own responsibility.

"One's sense was of a destruction so far-reaching and of a world so altered that it seemed foolish to go in any direction and expect to find things as they had been before the war began. I sat on the quarter deck with Mylius, my engineer, and Kemp and two others of the noncommissioned officers, and we consulted upon our line of action. We were foodless and aimless. We agreed that our fighting value was extremely small and that our first duty was to get ourselves in touch with food and instructions again. Whatever plan of campaign had directed our movements was manifestly smashed to bits. Mylius was of opinion that we could take a line westward and get back to England across the North Sea. He calculated that with such a motor barge as ours it would be possible to reach the Yorkshire coast within four and twenty hours. But this idea I overruled because of the shortness of our provisions and more particularly because of our urgent need of water.

"Every boat we drew near now bailed us for water, and their demands did much to exasperate our thirst. I decided that if we went away to the south we should reach hilly country or at least country that was not submerged, and then we should be able to land, find some stream, drink and get supplies and news. Many of the barges adrift in the haze about us were filled with British soldiers and had floated up from the Nord Sea canal, but none of them was any better informed than ourselves of the course of events. 'Orders' had, in fact, vanished out of the sky."

"Orders" made a temporary reappearance late that evening in the form of a megaphone hail from a British torpedo boat, announcing a truce and giving the welcome information that food and water were being hurried down the Rhine and were to be found on the barge flotilla lying over the Old Rhine above Leiden.

We will not follow Barnet, however, in the description of his strange overland voyage among trees and houses and churches by Zaandam and between Haarlem and Amsterdam to Leiden. It was a voyage in a red lit mist, in a world of steamy silhouette, full of strange voices and perplexity and with every other sensation dominated by a feverish thirst. "We sat," he says, "in a little huddled group, saying very little, and the men forward were mere knots of silent endurance. Our only continuing sound was the persistent mewling of a cat one of the men had rescued from a floating hayrick near Zaandam. We kept a southward course by a watch chain compass Mylius had produced."

"I do not think any of us felt we belonged to a defeated army, nor had we any strong sense of the war as the dominating fact about us. Our mental setting had far more of the effect of a huge natural catastrophe. The atomic bomb had dwarfed the international issues to complete insignificance. When our mind wandered from the preoccupations of our immediate needs we speculated upon the possibility of stopping the use of these frightful explosives before the world was utterly destroyed, for to us it seemed quite plain that these bombs and the still greater power of destruction of which they were the precursors might quite easily shatter every relationship and institution of mankind.

"What will they be doing?" asked Mylius. "What will they be doing? It's plain we've got to put an end to war. It's plain things have to be run some other way. This—all this—is impossible."

"I made no immediate answer. Something—I cannot think what—had brought back to me the figure of that man I had seen wounded on the very first day of actual fighting. I saw again his angry, tearful eyes and that poor, dripping, bloody mess that had been a skillful human hand five minutes before, thrust out in indignant protest. 'D—d foolery!' he had stormed and sobbed. 'D—d foolery! My right hand, sir; my right hand!'

"My faith had for a time gone altogether out of me. 'I think we are too—too silly,' I said to Mylius, 'ever to stop war. If we had the sense to do it we should have done it before this. I think this—and I pointed to the gaunt outline of a smashed windmill that stood up, ridiculous and ugly, above the blood lit waves—this is the end.'"

But now our history must part company with Frederick Barnet and his barge load of hungry and starving men.

For a time in western Europe at least it was indeed as if civilization had come to a final collapse. These Napoleon bled upon the tradition that Napoleon planted and Bismarck watered opened and fared "like water lilies of flame" over nations destroyed, over churches smashed or submerged, towns ruined, fields lost to mankind forever and a million wailing bodies. Was this lesson enough for mankind or would the flames of war still burn amidst the ruins?

Neither Barnet nor his companions, it is clear, had any assurance in their answers to that question. Already once in the history of mankind in America, before its discovery by the whites, an organized civilization had given way to a mere cult of warfare, specialized and cruel, and it seemed for a time to a thoughtful man as if the whole world was but to repeat on a larger scale this ascendancy of the warrior, this triumph of the destructive instincts of the race.

The subsequent chapters of Barnet's narrative do but supply body to this tragic possibility. He gives a series of vignettes of civilization shattered, it seemed, almost irreparably. He found the Belgian hills swarming with refugees and desolated by cholera, the vestiges of the contending armies keeping order under a truce—without actual battles, but with the cautious hostility of habit and a great absence of plan everywhere.

Overhead aeroplanes went on mysterious errands, and there were rumors of cannibalism and hysterical fanatics in the valleys of the Semoy and the forest region of the eastern Ardennes. There was the report of an attack upon Russia by the Chinese and Japanese and of some huge revolutionary outbreak in America. The weather was stormier than men had ever known it in those regions, with much thunder and lightning and wild cloud-bursts of rain.

CHAPTER VII.

Lebiano and King Egbert. On the mountain side above the town of Brissago and commanding two long stretches of Lake Maggiore, looking eastward to Bellinzona and southward to Luino, there is a shelf of grass meadows which is very beautiful in spring-time with a great multitude of wild flowers. More particularly is this so in early June, when the slender asphodel, St. Bruno's lily, with its spike of white blossom, is in flower. To the westward of this delightful shelf there is a deep and densely wooded trench, a great gulf of blue some miles or so in width, out of which arise great precipices very high and wild. Above the asphodel fields, the mountains climb in rocky slopes to solitudes of stone and sunlight that curve round and join that wall of cliffs in one common skyline. This desolate and austere background contrasts very vividly with the glowing serenity of the great lake below, with the spacious view of fertile hills and roads and villages and islands to south and east and with the holly golden rice flats of the Val Maggia to the north.

And because it was a remote and insignificant place, far away out of the crowded tragedies of that year of disaster, away from burning cities and starving multitudes, bracing and tranquilizing and hidden, it was here that there gathered the conference of rulers that was to arrest if possible before it was too late the debacle of civilization. Here, brought together by the indefatigable energy of that impassioned humanitarian, Lebknecht, the French ambassador at Washington, the chief powers of the world were to meet in a last desperate conference to "save humanity."

BUSINESS SECURITY.
Stagnation in All Countries, Not Learning This Security.
One of the most important questions of the day relates to the extent to which government should interfere in the affairs of business. The successful man has always had to run the risk of attack by competitors, by unreasonable exactions of government or of public opinion, by the ambition of his own men, by the greed of his neighbors, by the capriciousness of the market, by the uncertainty of the future, by the possibility of a sudden change in the conditions of the world. In such a society, nothing but poverty and business stagnation can be the result. Governmental intervention in the affairs of business should extend only over such things as are necessary for fair play and for the security of the individual. Under such a system, business security is at its best. Individual security and initiative are encouraged, the country is progressive, and its future prosperity is well guarded. But as soon as legislation begins to deprive the producer of a square deal, or where business is "regulated" by people without the experience and necessary training, business security will be transformed into business depression. A government should be limited to its natural functions of law and order, and should not attempt to do the greatest good of the greatest number of people. It should never show favor in order to catch votes or to secure campaign contributions.

In addition to Certain-teed Roofing, we also manufacture a complete line of lower priced roofings, building papers, shingles, sheathing, carpet linings, etc., put up in standard-sized rolls, packages and weights. ## BADGER STOCKMEN WIN HIGH HONORS IN FAIR CONTESTS

Cream of Wisconsin Herds Assembled at State Fair Grounds—Have Won Many High Honors.

(Special to the Gazette.)

WHAT WISCONSIN HAS WON.

At Missouri.
High honors on Shorthorn and Guernsey cattle, including best of breed, allowance of minor awards, sixteen firsts and at least seven championships. Wisconsin flockmasters made its creditable showing with Cotswold and Shropshire sheep.

In the greatest of the corn and grain best shows Wisconsin exhibitors took at least 143 coveted premiums on dairy cattle, thirty-five on beef cattle, ten on horses and fifty-three on sheep. The Iowa show yielded twenty-eight championships to the Badger state.

At Minnesota.
Incomplete returns give Wisconsin a wonderful record on the Hamline show. Competing there against exhibits from Minnesota, Iowa, the Dakotas and certain other states, Wisconsin herds and flockmasters took eighty-three awards on exhibits of three of the leading dairy breeds, twenty-nine on horses, sixteen on beef cattle, thirty-five on swine, and twenty-six on sheep.

At Indiana.
Although Wisconsin is known primarily as a dairy state, some of America's greatest beef herds are maintained upon farms. While three of the Badger Shorthorn herds were winning honors and recognition at Minnesota the past week, another was winning unstinted praise at Indiana, where were gathered the pride of the Hoosiers and Buckeyes.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 14.—There are being assembled at the State Fair park at West Allis today the cream of Wisconsin herds and flocks which have just returned from their circuit of middle western fairs. Wisconsin stockmen are always counted upon to do credit to themselves and the state whenever they enter competition, but the record of the present season has quite exceeded expectations.

Exhibits of Wisconsin horses, cattle, sheep and swine have been sent to several of the most important fairs which have been held in the corn belt. At each of these fairs, Wisconsin stockmen have been needed to complete the representations of the breeds, and from each contest the Wisconsin breeders have come away with a liberal share of the ribbons and awards. According to the reports received by the Wisconsin Live Stock Breeders' association, one of the most encouraging features of this record has been that a large proportion of the animals have been grown in Wisconsin, which in view of conditions existing in European countries is exceedingly important and encouraging. Many of the leading stockmen of the state are convinced that much is being done today to bring the Wisconsin farmer to a realization of the fact that Wisconsin is fitted by climate and soil and suited by location to be one of the very greatest livestock producing centers in the world. The opportunity offered Wisconsin farmers to display their stock in the present season is an unusual one. Among those who will assist in presenting Wisconsin's unusually attractive and economically important livestock exhibit at Milwaukee this week are the following: McWay Brothers, Janesville; George McKerrrow & Sons, Pewaukee; A. S. Baird & Son, Waukesha; L. F. Atwater, Bangor; J. D. McDonald, North Bend; W. Dixon, Brandon; W. M. Jones, Waukesha; George Philipps, Waukegan; Fox Brothers, Waukegan; Adam Seitz, Waukesha; Wendale Farm, Ladysmith; W. V. Vaughn, Lyons; W. C. Scheibe, Burlington; Alexander W. Arnold, Galveston; W. Woodward, Bloomer; Frank Harding, Waukesha; Herr Brothers & Reynolds, Lodi; E. D. Jones & Son, Rockland; Carpenter & Carpenter, Baraboo; J. C. Robinson & Son, Evansville; J. P. Allyn, Delavan.

AUDIENCE THRILLED BY BEACHEY'S FEATS

Death-defying Aviator With Somersaulting Aeroplane Gives Exhibition in South Beloit Sunday.

Over two hundred Janesville people were horrified and then thrilled witnessing Lincoln Beachey flitting with his track features at the Beloit fair grounds Sunday afternoon with his somersaulting aeroplane. An immense crowd, many of whom were on the outside of the grounds, witnessed the exhibition between Beachey, former dare-devil, and Barney Oldfield, former auto speed king.

The feature of the entire exhibition was Beachey's looping the loop in mid-air, flying upside down, defying death every second during the perilous feat. Three times Beachey mounted high in the air, swooped down like a circle completing the loop and then soared off into space as if the ordeal was an ordinary feat. A gale of wind was blowing yesterday, this did not prevent the daring aviator from going through the "paces" that made the audience dizzy to watch.

Because of the slow half mile track Barney Oldfield was unable to show the audience any dazzling speed with his high-powered racing machine but he gave an exhibition of skilled track driving that is seldom equaled. With his customary cigar, Barney attempted to break the track record and raced Beachey for several miles. The long turns necessitated slowing down at the curves and before speed could be picked up on the straight-aways Oldfield was forced to shut down for the next turn. His best time was 1:13, made in the Fiat cyclone.

NEW WIRELESS IDEA PROVES SUCCESSFUL

Beloit College Man Said To Have Communicated From Trains Without Wireless Towers.

According to word from Beloit, the experiments of Prof. C. A. Culver, head of the college physics department, who has been conducting railroad wireless telegraphy signaling and message transmission from Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, passenger trains running out of Janesville, the trials have been highly successful and encouraging to Prof. Culver.

The idea being worked upon by the Beloit man is to eliminate transmission towers at stations when wireless is used for dispatching and sending messages to and from moving trains. The towers are huge frameworks of steel erected along the railroad right-of-way at intervals of from one to three hundred miles. Considerable financial investment is represented in each framework and as yet the advisability of railway wireless installation does not warrant the cost of tower erection.

When working here Prof. Culver installed his station in the last car of the Davis Junction passenger train. He had no receiving apparatus but there was one located at the Beloit depot. The traveling station consisting of a transmitter and one of Edison's latest storage batteries, an instrument of great energy and capacity. He grounded a wire to the coach truck after it passed through the window from his apparatus. His aerial also was brought through the window and strung along the top of the four coaches of the train. It terminated in the baggage car.

Prof. Culver, after the train had started, would send messages with his key and attempt communication with his co-worker at Beloit. He would report the progress of the train, stops at their respective time and other incidental happenings. Later comparison would be made with the Beloit operator to verify the messages as both kept records of what was sent and what was received.

The trials were sanctioned by the St. Paul railway company, special permission for the use of the cars and stations having been secured from D. L. Bush, general manager of the system.

If the Beloit report is veritable, Prof. Culver's advent into the wireless field is assured. It is said that he has been asked to conduct his experiments on an eastern railroad.

The experience of recent wars shows the head and the right arm as the most frequent lodging places of projectiles.

DOSE-TIME INDICATOR

A Combined Cover and Spoonholder for the Sick-room Table.

A combined glass cover for the medicine glass and dose indicator is a convenience which will give a glad hand in the sickroom. Half the virtue of taking medicine lies in the regularity with which it is taken, so that it is an important thing to be remembered by the nurse that doses should be administered with the accuracy of a railroad schedule.

The new device, which has been recently patented, consists of a saucer-like shape which acts as a cover to the medicine glass with a central cavity to hold the bowl of the spoon.

GLASS COVER AND DOSE INDICATOR.

spoon. The handle of the spoon necessarily extends over the edge of the saucer, the latter being supplied with an upturned rim with small seats at rulings, which are numbered to indicate the hours, half hours and quarter hours. After administering one dose of medicine, the time of the next is indicated by placing the handle of the spoon in the place which is suitably marked.

TARIFF IMPROVEMENT ON SUGAR UNHEARD

Jones Writes Another Article Opposing Present Administration—Democracy Ignorant.

(Special to the Gazette.)
(By Winfield Jones.)
Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—While the democratic ways and means committee is racking its wits to make up a revenue tax bill to make up the $100,000,000 deficit in customs revenue caused by the European war, not a single chirp is heard from any of these dense and ignorant legislators regarding the restoration of the protective tariff on sugar, which used to produce, under republican administration, $50,000,000 annually for the treasury.

Having destroyed this source of revenue in the Wilson-Underwood bill, the democrats of the ways and means committee lack the courage to restore it when Uncle Sam badly needs the cash. Instead they are going to saddle a larger income tax on the people of this country and put taxes on other articles of universal consumption.

The advancing price of sugar and the world's short supply demonstrate that those who have persistently advocated the building up of a big sugar industry in this country have taken the right position. Protection to sugar was not simply a benefit to the growers by enabling them to develop this industry, but it was a safeguard to the nation, and its full development would save the $100,000,000 or more which the nation annually pays to foreign countries for sugar.

At the present price of sugar, with England buying all available stock and with France and Germany practically cut out as beet-sugar producers, it is altogether probable that we shall have to pay possibly twice as much for our sugar as in recent years, and the nation may in the next twelve months have to send to foreign lands $200,000,000 instead of $1,000,000 for sugar.

National Geographic Society War Primer

LAON—A town of northern France, 87 miles northeast of Paris, with a population of about 11,000. It is situated on an isolated ridge which rises some 330 feet above the surrounding plain and the little river of Ardon. From the railway station a straight staircase of several hundred steps leads to the gate of the town, and all the roads connecting Laon with the surrounding districts are cut in zig-zag with La Fere and Reims, a triangle of important fortresses. Its fortifications consist of an inner line of works on the eminence of Laon itself, and two groups of detached forts, one about the village of Bruyeres, the other about three miles west of southwest, near Laniscount. In 1814 Napoleon tried in vain to dislodge the British from Laon. In 1870 an Englishman blew up the tower magazine of the citadel as the German troops were entering the town.

REIMS—A town of northern France, 21 miles southwest of Metz, 11 miles north of the Marne, and 25 miles northwest of the Ardennes canal. Wool spinning and the weaving of light woolen fabrics are the principal industries. The town is of Roman origin. Its population is approximately 6,000.

LA PERE—A fortified French town, with about 13,000 inhabitants, on the Oise river, 25 miles west of south of St. Quentin, an equal distance from Laon, and 65 miles northeast of Paris. It was bombarded and taken by the Germans in 1870. A school of artillery founded in 1719 is still located here. An art collection of 600 paintings, a few of which are of great value and several of which were injured by the bombardment, is owned by the town.

DANZIG—A strong maritime fortress and seaport, the capital of West Prussia, on the western bank of the Vistula, 253 miles northeast of Berlin by rail. Its population is close to 175,000. The strong fortifications, with ramparts, bastions, and watered ditches, formerly surrounded the city, were removed on the north about 40,000.

Coffee Bean's Growth.
Healthy coffee trees produce in the axilla of each leaf from twelve to sixteen buds, which in flowering have exquisite perfume. These flowers become dark and wither and fall off in two or three days, leaving groups of seeds on the small stems. These seeds grow into the coffee berries, which closely resemble dark red cherries. Each berry contains two seeds, growing face to face, and these are the coffee beans of commerce.

TEN CENT DECLINE IN CATTLE PRICES

Heavy Run This Morning Meets
Fairly Steady Demand—Hogs
Take Another Slump.

(By Associated Press.)

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Heavy runs in cattle and hogs resulted in a slump in prices for both, on the Chicago market this morning. Cattle were in fairly good demand, however, at an average ten cents below Saturday's quotations. Hog prices had another slump and trade was inactive, bulk of sales ranging from $5.40 to $5.90. Following is the price list:

Cattle—Receipts: 23,000; market steady, 10c lower; beefs 8.90@10.90; Texas steers 6.50@8.50; stockers and feeders 5.40@8.25; cows and heifers 4.75@8.00; calves 8.00@12.00.

Hogs—Receipts: 29,000; market slow, 5c to 10c under Saturday's average; light 5.70@5.90; mixed 5.30@5.40; heavy 5.10@5.15; rough 5.10@5.20; pigs 4.75@5.25; bulk of sales 5.40@5.90.

Sheep—Receipts: 23,000; market strong, 10c higher; native 5.35@6.15; foreign 5.00@6.05; lambs, native 6.00@6.50.
